LAS VEGAS – The Nevada Firearms Coalition welcomes the United States Conference of Mayors to Las Vegas for their Annual Meeting and calls on Nevada mayors to be innovative in their discussions about safe communities and quit over-regulating the 2nd Amendment.

“Nevadans just said loud and clear that they opposed Bloomberg’s overreaching gun legislation, now mayors from across the country are coming to Las Vegas to discuss new strategies to over-regulate the 2nd Amendment when they really need to be talking about proven practices to reduce firearms accidents,” said Don Turner, President of the Nevada Firearms Coalition.

Turner cites the Nevada Department of Wildlife’s hunter safety program as an innovative way to promote firearm safety as an alternative to legislation and regulation.

“Nevada’s hunter safety program is an example of outside the box thinking that educates the public without removing our constitutional rights,” Turner said. “We need our elected officials to model after programs that are working within the Constitution rather than create new laws that further limit the rights of law-abiding Americans.”

Mayors oversee city resources, such as parks & recreation departments, that could be utilized to offer firearms safety classes to their residents. Just as the national and Nevada's hunter safety programs have drastically reduced firearms accidents while hunting, firearms safety classes can reduce firearms accidents and misuse within their jurisdictions without infringing on the Constitution.

The Nevada Firearms Coalition is a Nevada non-partisan grassroots organization of gun owners dedicated to the safe and responsible use of firearms for self-defense, competition, recreation, and hunting. NVFAC is committed to working with all elected officials to develop policies that will create safe communities without infringing on Nevada's 2nd Amendment Rights.
